

Preview

Figure number: 05-16
File name: 05_16.jpg

The preview image has been scaled down to fit the screen. Actual image is both larger and clearer.

Copyright © 2008 Pearson Prentice Hall, Inc.

Title: Languages in Belgium.

Caption: Belgians are sharply divided by their language differences. Flemings in the north speak Flemish, a Dutch dialect. Walloons in the south speak French. The two groups have had difficulty sharing national power. As a result, considerable power has been transferred to two regional assemblies, one each for Flanders and Wallonia.

Keywords: languages, language family, families, branches, Indo-European, groups, Romance, Germanic